Built as a sprite

Just like Twitter's Bootstrap, this drop-in uses sprites. I compiled all the Glyphicons FREE in to a sprite. icon-large.css creates a `icon-large` CSS class which can be applied like `icon-white`

All icons classes are prefixed with `.icon-` for proper namespacing and scoping, much like the other Bootstrap components.

Glyphicons provides these for free, SO LONG as proper attribution (or a license is purchased) from Jan Kovařík

How to use

Bootstrap Glyphicons uses the same structure (`` tag for all icons) just like Bootstrap, but to use the larger Glyphicons use an additional `icon-large` :

```

```

There are also styles available for inverted (white) icons, made ready with one extra class:

```

```

However, this isn't supported yet.

There are over 400 classes to choose from for your icons, including the original 140 halflings from Twitter Bootstrap setup

Use cases

Icons are great, but where would one use them? Here are a few ideas:

- As visuals for your sidebar navigation
- For a purely icon-driven navigation
- Icons next `<h2>` headings
- For large buttons to help convey the meaning of an action
- With links to share context on a user's destination

Essentially, anywhere you can put current `` tag icons.

Marco Ceppi made this little add-on because he's also a lazy developer.   Back to top

Bootstrap was designed and built by @mdo and @fat. Fabulous icons from Glyphicons Free, licensed under CC BY 3.0.
